Finding Fairy Tales, Fractured Fairy Tales, Fantasy & Folk tales

Fairy tales, Fantasy, and Folk tales are often referred to as Traditional Literature since they have their roots in the oral traditions of many cultures.

Fairy tales are fanciful stories written for or told to children, usually containing at least one supernatural element (magic, dragons, elves, ghosts, hobgoblins, witches, etc.) affecting people, animals, and/or things. Most fairy tales are based on the traditional folklore of a specific culture.

Fractured Fairy Tales are traditional fairy tales with a contemporary twist or a tale told from a new perspective.

Fantasy is any kind of fictional work that does not represent reality where magical powers and other impossibilities are accepted.

Folk tales are short stories rooted in oral traditions of a particular culture that may include improbable or supernatural elements. Many fairy tales, myths and legends began as folk tales.

How to Search for Fairy Tales

By Subject

You can use FSU's online catalog to search for any of the above terms by subject.

1. Go to the Goldstein Library webpage at: <http://slis.fsu.edu/About-The-School/The-Goldstein-Library>.
2. Click on the "Advanced Search" link under the FSU Libraries Catalog search box on the right-hand side of the page. This allows for advanced searching by subject.
3. Type in "fairy tales" in the first box. In the box beside it select the option to search by subject headings. You can also limit your search to the Goldstein Library by going further down the page, clicking on the "Location" tab and select "Goldstein Library". Your page should look like this:
